Economy in the Richness of R. Harris & Co.'s Jewelry

After the giving of thanks, the giving of presents. False economy in the giving of jewels and jewelry is too often present. Cheapness is not economy. The highest quality with the minimum of profit is the R. HARRIS & CO. ECONOMY. First, in DIAMONDS, we go abroad to the world's markets and buy. As importers we can sell diamonds to you at lower quotations than any other house in Washington. JEWELRY we make in our own factory right here on the premises. The R. Harris & Co. stock of WATCHES is the largest in the city. We employ the most expert watchmakers to inspect every watch we display. We are official inspectors of the watches of all employes of one of the largest railroads in the country.

It is not strange that the arrival of "LAY-AWAY TIME" is attracting increased attention to the R. HARRIS & CO. CHRISTMAS CORNER. Goods selected now for Christmas are cheerfully laid aside until desired.

REYNOLD'S

Former President Arraigned by Local Club Woman.

MRS. LOCKWOOD TALKS

FEDERATION OF WOMEN'S CLUBS IN ANNUAL SESSION.

Mr. Roosevelt Praised for His Opinion of the Fair Sex-Other Questions Discussed.

At the annual meeting of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. Mary S. Lockwood, as a past president of the federation, and one of its charter members, gave a resume of the work accomplished In the decade since the club women of Washington decided to co-operate.

"Before there were organized state federations," said Mrs. Lockwood, "many clubs were doing excellent specific work-each in its own line and environment, in accordance with local needs. No individual club is subject to a master, except the master of its high purposes for which its life began; but if the present purpose has not outgrown the original purpose in this age of progress something is lacking in the progressive spirit of the club. "Great movements are going forward, and not to be a factor in them is publishing our inactivity, and, as has been wisely said, we should show our willingness to stand aside and to let the world go by. If we have done good in our clubs we shall have learned 'the reward of one duty well done is the power to fulfill another.

is the power to fulfill another."

"With federation came the development of the clubs. The city club gains from contact with the vital work of country clubs—so full of life, energy and push. And so in the provision of God club women have grasped each other's hands until the great unbroken circle has been formed that reaches across the continent. Every link is welded with a high purpose, and over 700,000 women are marching forward. over 700,000 women are marching forward to new activities in the line of beneficence, philanthropy and education for the masses. To be sure, there are some clubs still who are self-centered and consider only themselves sufficient unto themselves. But you know what St. Paul said about those who measure themselves by themselves and compare themselves by themselves among themselves.

'He doe snot say that we must not try to show them a broader path, and when they walk in it that we cannot with them, side by side, leading them into the pastures gree nof a broader life where they have not grazed.

Power of Co-Operation.

"The power of co-operation can best be proved by a review of the work accomplished by the District Federation. Who believes for an instant that the laws here concerning women and children would ever have been considered by Congress through the efforts of a single club? 'When five thousand women are back of this question,' said one congressman, 'I know it is just, and I will vote for the bill.' So the Mussey bill became a law.

"Expectoration in the street cars was next taken up in Pro Re Nata, but it took the moral force of five thousand federation women to make it effective. The ves-tibuling of street cars, the striking out of the age limit of twenty-one for the night schools and the first appropriation for pub-lic kindergartens — $15,000 — was advocated and probably secured by the women in the

"The bill for the repeal of duty on art District Federatio Women's Clubs, and is now a burning question in the General Federaton of Women's Clubs.

"When the day comes that our artists can study the methods of the old masters at home-because the moneyed men of America stand ready to place these treasures before them as soon as the legislators come to realize there can be no competition on objects of art 2,000 years old. Then we as a people will keep our money, our purchased art treasures and out art students

"A little later on we hope to report that we, as a federation of 5,000 women, have been in our request for a trustee in each school district, that at least six of these trustees shall be women, and without recompense.

"The federation gave $50 for prizes at the Corcoran Art Gallery in the spring, and hopes to make a similar donation to encourage the students in art during the coming year. It has given $10 toward the fund for establishing a school for cooking, organized and conducted by colored women.

A Word for Mr. Cleveland.

"Now, let us take just a moment to warm over the scorching club women got from their friend, no, not friend, but brother, Grover Cleveland, in a magazine. Think of a man who never knew what a home was until he had almost reached the sear and yellow leaf of life lecturing women who were making homes beautiful before he had left the rollicking atmosphere of political club life! That is not the club life of the women of the National Federation of Womwomen of the National Federation of Women's Clubs; but he does not know the dif-ference, though he writes per order on the

"There might be essays written in like order which would show the same supreme ignorance, but we have been saved from seeing them in print. As has been well said, when a distinguished man undertakes to write about a subject about which he knows absolutely nothing, the more distinguished the man the more ridiculous his

"One striking statement of his is that he does not 'include charitable associations, benevolent or religious work.' 'These,' he says, 'can be left out of the count.'

"Had he known what he was dealing with he would have realized that each and every one of the three exceptions are an integral part of the foundation work of the society he condemns. It is the one woman's soclety that does stand for the home in its broadest and fullest meaning. All that he has said for the home has been a thousand times better said and better lived by the women who make up this society than by

"What has Mr. Cleveland to say of the three million working women and children for whom this society has stood, as between them and their greedy oppressors? This so-ciety demands that the home shall mean something for the poor and downtrodden, for the weary, the sorrowful, and yes, for the defenseless.

"Wealthy publishers who reach out for a little notoriety and a little more money and ex-Presidents who are helping them in their love for notoriety and gain are not in the category of altruists as it is known by the club women of America.

Work of Club Women.

"Is it detrimental to the home that by ears of labor club women have rescued children of tender years from the horrors of child labor in the mill and that in many of the states they have pressed bills through the legislatures, securing the passage of laws in twenty states protecting the homes of the future by rescuing the children?
"Does Mr. Cleveland know anything about the employment of women and children in dangerous and injurious trades, from which these club women have rescued thousands?

If so, we have never known of his having raised his voice or using his pen in their defense. Does he know of the long and successful battle these women have fought for factory inspectors in states where corrupt politicians had robbed the women and chilpoliticians had robbed the women and children of any protection from the law?

"Does he know of the sanitary inspectors who have been kept at work by the federation to report on incredible conditions even in the best-governed states? Does Mr. Cleveland object to the incessant labor of the club women in every state for the poor, the unfortunet programmer shoulder food and the unfortunate, securing shelter, food and employment, and, what is better than all securing for them self-support and self-"Add to this the defense of the legal and personal rights of all employes and the righting of wrongs with which ignorance had fettered them.

"There are instances in the federation where a single club has spent $40,000 in a year in the above work alone. (See Federation Sulletin) ation Bulletin.)

"Did you know this, Mr. Cleveland?

ulent club movements which have crossed the even tenor of the ways of womankind. "There are still many departments of work in the organization, on which we have not touched, such as the 'junior courts,' education of the children in citizenship, in education of the children in citizenship, in manual and moral training, to secure purefood laws, instruction in domestic science, the preservation of native trees and animals. They are exerting themselves to have the merit system made the basis of civil service for all local institutions for the dependent classes, in other words, have the positions taken out of the hands of pall.

positions taken out of the hands of politicians. "And do you really think, Mr. Cleveland that all this work is done to retaliate on the men? What have the men done that you think they deserve such retaliation?
"Contrast the written word of ex-President Cleveland with the spoken word of President Roosevelt. The latter, in an ad-dress to the New York state assembly of mothers on October 18, 1800, said: "The mother, to be a true mother, must be more than a cross between head nurse and housekeeper. She must have an interand housekeeper. She must have an interest in outside things to keep her own self-respect, and when she loses that self-respect she loses the respect of her children."

"Of the higher education of women Mr. Roosevelt said: 'No family can become all that it should be if the mother does not keep in touch sufficiently with outside inter-mation, Even if Not Guilty. afternoon by Detective Cornwell and taken to police headquarters because he was trying to sell a gold watch. "But," he added, "the boys call be 'Bobby,' and I ain't no bad boy."

"What about the watch?" the detective asked him "Mrs. Zeller gave it to me," he declared. While the detective was trying to locate Mrs. Zeller to ascertain if the boy had told the truth, the colored youth changed his story about the manner in which he had

"I'm going to tell you the truth about it," he said. "I took it, but I hope you will let me go home to my mother. My mother always tried to keep me in the straight path. She told me not to go with bad boys, but I went with them and they taught me to steal. 'Deed mister I ain't a bad boy, and when I get out of this I will never take anything again. When will you take me to court?"

"Monday," the boy was told.
"Can't you take me before then?" he

Carter gave his age as twelve years. He said he took the watch several months ago and carried it until he dropped it on the pavement and smashed it. One day last pavement and smashed it. One day last week he was on D street looking in windows and saw a place where old watches are bought. As the timeplece was of no further use to him he thought he would sell it and realize money enough to buy a cap. If there was any money left after he had made the purchase, he said, he might have bought a Christmas present for the younger children at home. He said he was positive about the matter of his experience affecting a reformation in him and declared he would never touch property belonging to would never touch property belonging to others again.
